OHIO RIVER CLAIMS SECOND VICTIM FOR PRESENT SEASON

Fourteen-year-old Boy Is Pulled Down
By Strong Undercurrent—Body Recovered in About an Hour.

William Edward Cooper, fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cooper of the West End, was drowned in the Ohio River at a point just below the old Beasley eddy at about 6:30 o'clock Friday evening.

The boy with his younger brother, Otis, were in bathing and were riding a log, when the older brother slipped from the log. Old timers, who know this section of the river, say that there is a very strong undercurrent from the eddy above in this section and it is supposed that the boy was caught by the under current and swept rapidly to the bed of the river.

Immediately upon the boy's sinking, the alarm was sounded by his younger brother and a search was started. The body was recovered a short distance from where he sank within an hour and physicians endeavored to resuscitate him but their efforts were of no avail.

The younger brother became very much excited and also sank but he was rescued by men nearby and was revived by the physicians.

Neither of the boys could swim.

HOW DO LOOK.

WHEN CARTOONED?

Look out! Weaver, the cartoonist, is coming to the Chautauqua Tuesday afternoon, August eighth. He has his paper and crayons ready—what will suggest itself to him? Timely topics—ridiculously funny occurrences—the inspiring beauty of nature—the worthwhileness of observation—and just downright foolishness. He is a veritable "picture show" and lecturer all in one. At last we have a successful "talking movie."

You can buy the $2 Chautauqua tickets at the Ledger office. 28-1f

She said that she awakened her husband, but went back to sleep again when he told her that she must have been dreaming.

An effort was being made Friday by the authorities to have Mrs. Phillips recall what other words she heard uttered in the Renaker home besides the calls for help.

Mrs. Phillips said she could not remember the other words she heard. Detective Slater said if all other methods failed to recall to the woman the words uttered he might ask her to submit to hypnosis.

Along with numerous clues being run down by then the Crim Detective Bureau Friday had an expert working on fingerprints found in the dead man's bedroom. It was thought that after the prints had been developed additional light may be thrown on the mystery.

It also was learned Friday that Renaker carried an insurance policy on his life of $51,000. His wife, according to information from Winchester, was named as his beneficiary. Another recent act of Renaker shortly before his death, was that he made application for membership in a Winchester church.

CARTOONIST WEAVER.

Cartoons and "Funny Pictures" are more widely used by newspapers than any other material that appears in printed form. It is because of the universal demand that the newspapers everywhere publish them. That is why G. E. Weaver, the cartoonist who came to the Chautauqua Tuesday afternoon, August eighth, is meeting with such impressive success everywhere. He is as full of fun as a June day is full of sunshine. His talks are irresistibly funny—pictures and jokes appear simultaneously—a few tears are thrown in to make the laughter all the more hearty. His chalk talk lectures are different from all others.

OLD FEUD MAY BE BEHIND MURDER OF WINCHESTER MAN

Detectives Work on Clue That Old Feud Between Renaker and Another Prominent Family May Have Been Renewed.

Working on a clue, the nature of which they declined to divulge, operatives of the Cal Crim Detective Bureau Friday night predicted an early solution of the mystery connected with the murder on Monday night of Leon Renaker, 37 years old, Winchester, Kentucky.

Renaker was found dead in bed on Tuesday by his wife upon her return home from Cincinnati.

From the position of his body, Winchester officials, authorities of Clark county and detectives from the Crim bureau declare that his murderer stole into the house and struck him over the head while he was seated on the side of his bed.

Adam Renaker, the murdered man's uncle, who lives in Covington and who returned from Winchester Friday, said he thought the death of his nephew probably would be linked eventually with a feud of long standing existing between the Renaker family and another family well known in the vicinity of Winchester.

The feud was "born" on Halloween night, 1910, when Chapman Renaker, a brother of Leon, was shot and killed during an argument in which he drew a knife.

Renaker's assailant was tried in a Cynthiana (Ky.) court and was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary after pleading self-defense.

Adam Renaker said last night that the Winchester police were endeavoring to trace a man who had been seen walking toward home with Renaker the night he was killed.

One angle being looked into Friday by officials and Ora Slater and F. D. Curry of the Crim bureau was a story told by Mrs. William Phillips, whose home is near the Renaker home.

Mrs. Phillips told the investigators that on Monday night she was awakened by cries for "help," and other sounds coming from the Renaker apartment.

She said that she awakened her husband, but went back to sleep again when he told her that she must have been dreaming.

An effort was being made Friday by the authorities to have Mrs. Phillips recall what other words she heard uttered in the Renaker home besides the calls for help.

Mrs. Phillips said she could not remember the other words she heard. Detective Slater said if all other methods failed to recall to the woman the words uttered he might ask her to submit to hypnosis.

Along with numerous clues being run down by then the Crim Detective Bureau Friday had an expert working on fingerprints found in the dead man's bedroom. It was thought that after the prints had been developed additional light may be thrown on the mystery.

BOOSTING STATE FAIR ALL OVER THE STATE

Colonel Russell Taking Great Interest In Letting People Know About Kentucky State Fair.

Beyond a doubt Colonel J. Barbour Russell, manager of the Kentucky Cardinal Band, is the biggest booster in the state and that fair which gets him interested certainly is a winner for we believe he could put it across single handed any place.

Just now the Colonel is devoting much attention to boosting the Kentucky State Fair for which the Cardinals will play. The following letter is from Mr. Lewis M. Lebus, Cynthiana, one of the directors of the State Fair:

"Dear Mr. Russell:—The postal cards received, and I sure will get them out, for they are going to do the fair a lot of good. Yes, your man put the window cards in nearly every place in town, and I want to tell you that they are being noticed. I have heard more favorable comment from them than from those we put up last year for the fair.

"Keep up the good work. Yours,

"LEWIS M. LEBUS."
